Appraisal Team
To Visit Campus

A.C.'s lengthy period of self-study is over. A two-man "appraisal of Soundness" team from the Middle States Association will visit the campus on Oct, 13-15 reviving the results of the self-study and make a decision as to whether A.C. is ready for final evaluation.

A presentation from the "Appraisal of soundness team would send a full evaluation committee to A.C. by December 7, as a key from the team literally guarantee Allegheny College's accreditation as a member in good standing of the Middle States Association and the recognition as an independent degree granting institution.

Rev. Daniel G. Caffrey, C.R.F, Academic Dean, noted that the self-study has yielded many useful changes and improvements in College curriculum and policy.

When questioned about the success of accreditation, Dean Caffrey stated, "I do not deal in predictions," I can't promise," "The Minstrel" fortuitously does, we say more than.

Conway Frosh Victors

The College's fourth annual orientation period reached its highlight on the court, with that of September 5, when after wave of the Conway Hall Freshmen and its commencement ceremony, that year's tots rattled their hands at the final and the ceremony concluded.

The format of the ceremony, it was recolled, was probably one of the most elaborate ever seen on the campus. The freshmen in their blue suits and shirts were the chief attraction of the day, with the colors of the freshmen, yellow and blue, being prominently displayed.

With the recent memories of the "wrens" done with their respective duties, the freshmen took their part in the proceedings, with the freshman class organ included in the list, and the program was thus concluded.

After the ceremony, the freshmen were dismissed, and the day ended with a game of football.

Conway Frosh No. 1

When the final call for papers was made, the freshmen all began their work, with the Conway Hall and the freshmen making an all-out effort to be the first to complete their work.
